Letters dispute proposed beach-cleanup methods

Two speakers raised different views on collecting aquaculture debris during a Denman trust committee discussion of a Fisheries and Oceans Canada initiative.

REPORT — FACTS AND CITATIONS ONLY

THE DENMAN FIRESTARTER

At its August 1 meeting, the Denman Island Local Trust Committee heard differing views on Fisheries and Oceans Canada’s beach-cleanup initiative.¹

A member of the public said the initiative would not solve escaped aquaculture equipment and suggested adding education for operators.¹

A representative of the Association for Denman Island Marine Stewards said the group opposed a plan relying on vehicles driving on the beach and preferred a dumpster at Buckley Bay. Another member of the public said recycling collected equipment back to operators was preferable to dumping.¹
