Nature Trust launches $1-million Denman forest campaign

The Nature Trust of BC says it has an opportunity to buy 38.7 hectares of mature coastal forest on Denman Island and is seeking donations.

THE DENMAN FIRESTARTER

The Nature Trust of British Columbia has launched a campaign to raise $1 million to purchase and protect 38.7 hectares of mature Coastal Douglas-fir forest on Denman Island. The organization said the funds must be raised by the end of 2023.<sup>1</sup>

The proposed purchase area is next to the Denman Conservancy Association’s Central Park conservation area and Denman Island

Provincial Park and Protected Area. The Nature Trust said the combined conservation area would cover 187 hectares if the purchase goes ahead.<sup>1</sup>

The release describes forests, wetlands and open areas, including a riparian corridor along Beadnell Creek. It says the area provides habitat for at-risk species, including Taylor’s Checkerspot butterfly, and that ten bird species listed under the federal Species at Risk Act have been seen on or near the property.<sup>1</sup>

The Nature Trust invited the public to donate to the campaign. The release says the organization has been given the opportunity to purchase the land; it does not say the purchase is complete.<sup>1</sup>

Seniors and Museum Society proposes constitution change

The society plans to ask members at its November 22 annual meeting to recognize the museum and archives as a program.

THE DENMAN FIRESTARTER

The Denman Seniors and Museum Society plans to present a special resolution at its annual general meeting on Wednesday, November 22, to amend its constitution and bylaws.<sup>1</sup>

The proposed addition would recognize the Museum and Archives as a society program and place it under terms of reference for a committee endorsed by the board.<sup>1</sup>

The notice says the society’s board believes the museum needs recognition as a program rather than only as part of the building, and says the museum and archives manage community cultural assets over time. The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Activity Centre Lounge.<sup>1</sup>
